WHY WOMEN LIVE LONGER

Physicians Ascribe Fact to a More Sheltered Existence, for One Thing.

Though doctors have long realized that, thanks to a better knowledge of sanitation and personal hygiene, people are living longer than formerly, the much greater relative longevity of women, as shown in the recently published national debt office's report on the mortality of government life annuitants, has come as a general surprise.

In a summary of these figures it was shown that the expectation of life of a woman of fifty is now more than a year greater than it was in 1875, while that of a man of the same age is only about three months greater.

Discussing the reasons of our increasing longevity, and in particular woman's stronger hold on life, physicians at St. Bartholomew's hospital advanced widely different theories. "The essential cause of death," one stated, "is a wearing out from overwork of our brain cells. Women may be just as brainy as men, but they do not work their brain cells as vigorously or as continuously as do their men relatives. If they did there would not be so great a disparity in the length of life of the two sexes."

Another consultant put down woman's greater expectation of life to the more sheltered existence she leads, and the lack of physically depressing competition which is part of nearly every man's life. "A woman may have hard work to do," he explained, "but, except for the few who work in offices or who follow professions, they work in their own homes, and at a pace they set for themselves. The home is also as a rule vastly more airy, sunny, and generally more wholesome than is her husband's shop or office."

MARVEL IN ANIMAL SOUND

Traveler Writes Feelingly of Wonderful Bray Put Forth by the Donkeys of China.

In all the east today the donkey is a favorite means of transportation, both for travelers and commercial burdens. It was so in the days of the patriarchs, Isaac and Jacob, and so it will remain probably for ages to come. But nothing in China is just like the same thing anywhere else in the world, the donkey being no exception. Dr. Chester of Nashville says: "Their gait is a rough, insufferable jog, and their bray is a unique phenomenon."

"The power of heredity, working through millenniums of isolation, with no modification from foreign admixture, has developed in the bray of the Chinese donkey a quality all its own. There are no words in English to describe the heart-rending pathos of it. It was as if an appeal to heaven against the cruelty and oppression of ages were at last finding utterance in one long, loud, undulating wail. And when our party of three met another party of six and all nine of the donkeys began at one time to exchange the compliments of the day, then pathos gave place to terror and one could only sit appalled and trembling as the mighty reverberation rolled away on its journey round the world."

Useful Pets in the Orient.

When I first took up my residence in Singapore one of the strangest things I saw was a number of lizards that crawled about the walls, says the London Telegraph. My first few days were spent in one of the largest and most up to date hotels, and I thought it strange that such things should be allowed "the run of the house."

On making inquiries, I learned that these little animals were called "chihaks," and are necessary in every house, as they do no harm to anything or anybody except the numerous insects (mosquitoes included) that all tropical countries are plagued with.

The chihak is treated with the greatest respect, and some of them are quite tame. There is one little fellow always on our dining table, and another can always be found under a fellow boarder's inkstand. The boarder, being a "brave Scot," has christened his little friend "Wee Jock."

Fortune Telling.

Fortune telling is almost as old as the human race itself. We have no knowledge of the time when or place where it originated. We only know that the practice was in vogue as far back as we can go. Some claim that it had its beginning with the astrologers, who claimed that they were able to foretell the future by aid of the planets. The oldest of the nations were familiar with the practice, and by the gypsies it has been carried all over the world. It is perfectly natural for man to want to know about tomorrow and next year, and it required but little effort on his part to listen to the fortune tellers. To this day the business is carried on with profit by the gypsies and others who impose upon the credulity of the superstitious.

Heard the Rattle.

The witness on the stand was being subjected to cross-examination. In answering one question he nodded. Whereupon the court stenographer, who could not see the witness, demanded, "Answer that question."

The witness replied: "I did answer it; I nodded my head."

"Well, I heard the rattle, but could not tell whether it was up or down or from side to side," answered the stenographer.—Law Notes.

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

Now Comes the Golf Faker.

A ball played by a golfer at Weston-super-Mare struck a skylark, so we read, and cut the bird's head off. You should hear us tell our story of the golf ball which stuck in a bird's beak in the middle of its flight. The bird flew off with the ball to its nest. Fortunately for the player, the bird had made its nest in the next hole.—London Globe.

What Puzzled Him.

"What are you puzzling about?" "I'm writing a sketch for vaudeville on the current political situation." "Well, you ought to have plenty of good stuff to put in." "That isn't what puzzles me. I've got so much good stuff I don't know what to leave out."

KING EDWARD AS A 'DRUMMER'

England Had No Better Travelling Salesman Than He, According to Biographer.

King Edward VII. of England created a new type of monarch. Edward protected and enlarged the nation's resources. There was not in the whole United Kingdom a more industrious commercial traveler or a better merchant. He only wore the crown when it was absolutely necessary. He mingled with men of all classes and professions, had had experiences to which crown princes are not usually exposed, had been on familiar terms with financiers and captains of industry, and had learned to look on the world with the eye of a comfortable gentleman. He was quickly at home everywhere. Whether he had to deal with the self-controlled Alexander or his volatile son, with Indian princes or Yankees, with the fiery Delcasse or the witty Clemenceau, he always struck the right note.

He was a lucky man. He enjoyed life from the day he left the nursery. Englishmen did not mind that. They would not have liked a morose and stingy monarch. Prince Bertie, who ate well, drank well, did well at the derby, at the tables, and settled the fashion of the season, was the man for them. It did not seem to them a serious misfortune that he was hostile to Bismarck, and at times went a little too far with shady people. He always drew his head out of the noose in time, and then gave England occasion for another chuckle.—From a Biographical Sketch by Maximilian Harden.

HAVE MANY YEARS OF LIFE

Residents of English Village Favored Beyond Other Mortals in Matter of Longevity.

Horndon-on-the-Hill, a village of six hundred persons, in the county of Essex, England, has attracted notice as being a spot where old age reigns in undisputed triumph. Walk through the picturesque narrow main street which twists across the hillside and from the doorways the passerby will see smiling at him the happy, ruddy faces of the ancients of Horndon. A London newspaper the other day found in this village, which by the way has not a doctor in it, twelve persons whose united ages are 1,049 years, these ages ranging from eighty-four to ninety years, while young persons, men and women of seventy-five and thereabout, were too numerous to deserve notice. One lad of eighty-six, who is on the way to be a philosopher, said: "A smile and a kiss made the world easy and do a lot of keeping one young, this and a fair share of work." In illustration of a part of this axiom he snatched a kiss from his wife, who is one year his senior. "You're nearly as bad as when you were young," said that lady, "and he wanted a lot of watching then."

More Study Family Tree.

The growing interest in ancestry indicates that Americans are coming to believe that it is of some consequence to know from whom they are descended, the Magazine of American History states. Long lines of ancestry are revealed in each person, and this ancestry, if understood, will assist materially in various directions.

One cannot know too much about himself and in acquiring a knowledge of his ancestors he is learning the most important facts about his own personality. This has been demonstrated many times.

Genealogy is the most fascinating branch of history. Everything else may be a mere catalogue of dates, but genealogy introduces the student to the actual personages and offers him the complete means of obtaining an accurate understanding of the occurrences of the past. The study of ancestry is becoming more popular and is, in numerous ways, revolutionizing the modern comprehension of events in the past.

Family Secrets.

A girl has plenty of time to decide on the details of her wedding before the man has figured out whether her eyes are blue or gray.

Being conservative in politics never keeps a man from being screamingly insurgent in the matter of ties and socks.

A really clever woman never makes the mistake of assuming that only a man can comprehend her cleverness.

You may cure the vices of a bad woman, conquer the shortcomings of the indifferent woman, but nothing will avail in the face of a good woman's prejudices.

The woman who "dares to be different" is talked about, the man who plays the game is merely tolerantly laughed at—but at best the woman wouldn't change places with him.—Lippincott's.

Boy's Good Guess.

The story is told of Judge McCannless of Wichita, who has the distinction of being the leanest man in the state, that he was one day walking along a street in Kansas City when he noticed that a hound dog was following him.

After he had gone a block and the dog was still trailing him, he turned to a street gamln and asked: "Boy, what do you suppose that dog is following me for?"

"Well, mister," said the boy, as he looked the judge over from head to foot, "I dunno exactly, but my idee is that he takes you for a bone."—Topsaks Capital.
